TO INTERSECT. v. a. [interseco, Lat.] To cut; to divide each other mutually.

Perfect and viviparous quadrupeds so stand in their position of proneness, that the opposite joints of neighbour legs consist in the same plane; and a line descending from their navel intersects at right angles the axis of the earth.

Excited by a vigorous loadstone, it will somewhat depress its animated extreme, and intersect the horizontal circumference.

TO INTERSECT. v. n. To meet and cross each other.

The sagittal suture usually begins at that point where these lines intersect.

INTERSECTION. n. f. [intersectio, Lat. from intersect.] Point where lines cross each other.

They did spout over interchangeably from side to side in forms of arches, without any intersection or meeting aloft, because the pipes were not opposite.

The first star of Aries, in the time of Meton the Athenian, was placed in the very intersection, which is now elongated, and moved eastward twenty-eight degrees.

Ships would move in one and the same surface; and consequently must needs encounter, when they either advance towards one another in direct lines, or meet in the intersection of cross ones.

TO INTERSECT. v. a. [interseco, Lat.] To put in between other things.

If I may intersect a short philosophical speculation, the depth of the sea is determined in Pliny to be fifteen furlongs.

INTERSECTION. n. f. [from intersect.] An insertion, or thing inserted between any thing.

These two intersections were clear explications of the apostle's old form, God the father, ruler of all, which contained an acknowledgement of the unity.

TO INTERSPERSE. v. a. [interspersus, Lat.] To scatter here and there among other things.

The possibility of a body's moving into a void space beyond the utmost bounds of body, as well as into a void space interspersed amongst bodies, will always remain clear.

It is the editor's interest to insert what the author's judgment had rejected; and care is taken to intersperse these additions in such a manner, that scarce any book can be bought without purchasing something unworthy of the author.

INTERSPERSION. n. f. [from intersperse.] The act of scattering here and there.

For want of the interspersions of now and then an elegiac or a lyric ode.

INTERSTELLAR. adj. [inter and stellar, Lat.] Intervening between the stars.

The interstellar sky hath so much affinity with the star, that there is a rotation of that as well as of the star.

INTERSTICE. n. f. [interstitium, Lat. interstices, Lat.] Space between one thing and another.

The sun shining through a large prism upon a comb placed immediately behind the prism, his light, which passed through the interstices of the teeth fell upon a white paper: the breadths of the teeth were equal to their interstices, and seven teeth together with their interstices took up an inch in breadth.

The force of the fluid will separate the smallest particles which compose the fibres, so as to leave vacant interstices in those places where they cohered before.

TO INTERRUPT. v. a. [inter and rumpo, or twip.] To unite by twisting one in another.

Under some concurrence of shades,
Whose branching arms thick intertwine'd might shield
From dews and damps of night his thicket'd head.

INTERVAL. n. f. [intervallum, Latin.] 1. Space between places; interstice; vacuity; space unoccupied; void place; vacancy; vacant space.

With any obstacle let all the light be now stopped which passes through any one interval of the teeth, so that the range of colours which comes from thence may be taken away, and you will see the light of the rest of the ranges to be expanded into the place of the range taken away, and there to be coloured.

2. Time passing between two assignable points.

The century and half following, to the end of the third Punic war, was a very busy period at Rome; the intervals between every war being so short.

3. Remission of a delirium or distemper.

Though he had a long illness, considering the great heat with which it raged, yet his intervals of sense being few and short, left but little room for the offices of devotion.

TO INTERVENE. v. n. [intervenio, Lat. intervenir, Fr.] To come between things or persons; to be intercepted; to make intervals.

While so near each other thus all day
Our talk we chafe, what wonder, if so near,
Looks intervene, and smiles.

15. The danger of an action, and the possibilities of miscarriage, and every cross accident that can intervene, to be either a mercy on God's part, or a fault on ours.

INTERVENE. n. f. [from the verb.] Opposition, or perhaps interview. A word out of use.

They had some sharper and some milder differences, which might easily happen in such an intervene of grandes, both vehement on the parts which they wayed.

INTERVENIENT. adj. [interveniens, Lat. intervenient, French.] Intercurrent; interposed; passing between.

There be interveniens in the life of eight, in tones, two bemols or half notes.

The day will come, when the passions of former enmity being allayed, we shall with ten times redoubled tokens of reconciled love shew ourselves each towards the other the same, which Joseph and the brethren of Joseph were at the time of their interview in Egypt.

His fears were, that the interview betwixt England and France might, through their amity, breed him some prejudice.

Such happy interviews, and fair event
Of love, and youth not lost, songs, garlands, flow'rs,
And charming symphonies, attach'd the heart
Of Adam.

TO INTERVOLVE. v. a. [intervolvio, Latin.] To involve one within another.

Mytical dance! which yonder starry sphere
Of planets, and of fix'd, in all her wheels
Rembles nearest; mazes intricate,
Eccentric, intervolv'd, yet regular,
Then most, when most irregular, they seem.

TO INTERWEAVE. v. a. preter. interwove, part. pass. interwoven, interwove, or interwoven. [inter and weave.] To mix one with another in a regular texture; to intermingle.

Then laid him down
Under the hospitable covert night
Of trees thick interwoven.

Words interwove with sighs found out their way.

I sat me down to watch upon a bank
With ivy canopied, and interwove
With haunting honeyfuckle.

Can say here nature ends, and art begins,
But mixt like th' elements, and born like twins,

INT

So interview'd, so like, so much the same:
None, this mere nature, that mere art can name.

The proud theatres disclose the scene,
Which interview Britons seem to raise,
And show the triumph which their shame displays.

He so interviews truth with probable fiction, that he puts a pleasing fallacy upon us.

It appeared a vast ocean planted with islands, that were covered with fruits and flowers, and interview with a thousand little shining seas that ran among them.

It is a confusion of kitchen and parterre, orchard and flower-garden, which lie so mixt and interview with one another, as to look like a natural wilderness.

The Supreme Infinite could not make intelligent creatures, without implanting in their natures a most ardent desire, interview in the substance of their spiritual natures, of being reunited with himself.

I do not altogether disapprove the interviewing texts of scripture through the style of your sermon.

TO INTERWISH. v. a. [inter and wish.] To wish mutually to each other.

The venom of all stepdames, gamester's gall,
What tyrants and their subjects interview,
All ill fall on that man.

INTESTABLE. adj. [intestabilis, Latin.] Disqualified to make a will.

A person excommunicated is rendered infamous and intestable both actively and passively.

INTESTATE. adj. [intestat, Fr. intestatus, Latin.] Wanting a will; dying without will.

Why should calamity be full of words?
—Windy attorneys to their client woes,
Airy succeders of intestate joys,
Poor breathing orators of miseries.

Present punishment pursues his maw,
When forfeited and swell'd, the peacock raw,
He bears into the bath; whence want of breath,
Repletions, apoplex, intestate death.

INTESTINAL. adj. [intestinal, Fr. from intestine.] Belonging to the guts.

The mouths of the lacteals are opened by the intestinal tube, affecting a straight instead of a spiral cylinder.

INTESTINE. adj. [intestin, Fr. intestinus, Latin.] 1. Internal; inward; not external.

Of these inward and intestinal enemies to prayer, there are our past sins to wound us, our present cares to distract us, our distempered passions to disorder us, and a whole swarm of loose and floating imaginations to molest us.

Intestine war no more our passions wage,
Ev'n giddy factions hear away their rage.

2. Contained in the body.

Intestine stone, and ulcer, cholick pangs,
And moon-struck madnels.

A wooden jack, which had almost
Lost, by disuse, the art to roast,
A sudden alteration feels,
Increas'd by new intestine wheels.

3. Domestick, not foreign. I know not whether the word be properly used in the following example of Shakespeare: perhaps for mortal and intestine should be read mortal intestine.

Since the mortal and intestine jars
Twixt thy seditious countrymen and us,
It hath in solemn synods been decreed,
To admit no traffick to our adverse towns.

But God, or Nature, while they thus contend,
To these intestine discords put an end.

She saw her sons with purple deaths expire,
A dreadful series of intestine wars,
Inglorious triumphs, and dishonest fears.

INTESTINE. n. f. [intestinum, Lat. intestine, Fr.] The gut; the bowel: most commonly without a singular.

The intestines or guts may be inflamed by an acrid substance taken inwardly.

TO INTHRALL. v. a. [in and thrall.] To enslave; to shackle; to reduce to servitude. A word now seldom used, at least in prose.

What though I be inthrall'd, he seems a knight,
And will not any way dishonour me.

The Turk has sought to extinguish the ancient memory of those people which he has subjected and inthrall'd.

Authors to themselves in all
Both what they judge, and what they choose; for so
I form'd them free, and free they must remain
Till they inthrall themselves.

She soothes, but never can inthrall my mind:
Why may not peace and love for once be join'd.

INTRALMENT. n. f. [from inthrall.] Servitude; slavery.

Moses and Aaron, sent from God to claim
His people from intralment, they return
With glory, and spoil, back to their promis'd land.
